WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA

A Biographical Dictionary of Notable Living Men and Women of the United States. Established, 1899, by Albert Nelson Marquis. Edited by John W. Leonard. Full cloth. Price, $3.50.

This publication aims to give a brief, crisp personal sketch of every living man and woman in the United States whose position or achievements make his or her personality of general interest, and tells just the things every intelligent person wants to know about those who are most conspicuous in every walk of life.

A valuable feature of the book will be found in the appended addresses. No other work has ever attempted the laborious task of finding and furnishing the addresses of leading Americans in all parts of the world. Thus, the book possesses not only the best attributes of a Biographical Dictionary, but is also a handy Directory of those living people of the United States in whom almost everybody is interested.

"Who's Who in America" is thoroughly revised, brought down and reissued biennially. No one who aims to keep abreast of the times can afford to be without a copy at his elbow constantly. The 1906-7 edition will be ready about Jan. 1, 1906. It will contain about 16,000 names and about 2,000 pages. The volume is compact and of convenient size for carrying in the satchel.

"Who's Who in America" has proved one of the most useful and satisfactory of our desk reference books the past year.—W. T. Harris, U. S. Commissioner of Education.

I constantly use the work and constantly recommend it to others. It is worth many times the price to any busy man.—Col. Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Author, Boston, Mass.

This book is indispensable to every reader of newspapers, to every library, and to every man and woman who reads or writes.—Chicago Tribune.

The most useful book, next to a good English Dictionary, that it has been my fortune to see. It is a marvel of condensation and convenience. —Dr. W J McGee, Ethnologist, Washington, D. C.

One of the most, probably the most, indispensable of reference books of its kind ever published. We welcome the new revised and enlarged edition which has just been published.—Public Opinion.

PREFACE.

The Book of Chicagoans, after a long and patient campaign of research and inquiry, is now presented with confidence that every promise and prediction made for it has been fulfilled. The volume contains a vastly larger collection of personal sketches of Chicago people than has ever before been gathered together, and not only in numbers, but also in the quality of the people whose life-statistics are presented, the book may fairly claim precedence. It is the best showing ever made of biographical data concerning those living men who best represent the reputable efforts and creditable activities of the City of Chicago.

The Book of Chicagoans is modeled on the plan of "Who's Who in America," a now world-famous publication, recognized as the highest authority on personal data pertaining to nationally notable living Americans. It is edited and published by the same persons who have placed "Who's Who in America" in the foremost position among American works of reference. It follows the same lines of carefulness and discrimination, but is entirely confined to pertinent data about the living men of Chicago and vicinity who are entitled to be included in a work of this character.

Names which should have been included will be missed, but in practically all such cases the omission is not in the least due to the lack of effort on the part of those having the preparation of the book in hand. By mailed request or personal solicitation all who were regarded as eligible were solicited, in a respectful way, to furnish personal data. The great majority of those so requested furnished the data freely and in a courteous manner, and to them thanks are hereby extended. A few gave information with evident reluctance and others showed complete indifference and let the requests for data go unnoticed.

Some names which frequently appear in the newspapers are conspicuous by their absence for the reason that the Book of Chicagoans has endeavored only to include men of good standing and reputable vocation.

Notwithstanding the reasons named, which have prevented the inclusion of persons whose life-sketches it had been intended to give, the publication may make just claim to greater completeness, a greater degree of accuracy and a more dependable and authoritative record in regard to the leaders in the business, professional, industrial, official and intellectual life of Chicago than has ever before been collected.

To make such a publication dependable it is necessary that it should be impartial and unpurchasable. The Book of Chicagoans has been compiled as a reference book, and all of the sketches in the volume have been inserted with that fact in view. Not one has been paid for, nor inserted for any financial consideration. A perusal of these pages will reveal at once the absence of those terms of fulsome adulation and adjectival exuberance which are the earmarks of those too-frequent volumes of paid puffery which have heretofore, to so large an extent, masqueraded under the honest name of Biography.

To secure accuracy the greatest care has been taken. In every case where possible the facts were procured, at first hands, and the sketches were submitted for verification and correction, thus giving to the book a quality practically autobiographical. In this painstaking way its authenticity has been safeguarded and its value as a reference book has been established.

The volume has been confined to living subjects, because the purpose from the first has been to furnish a dictionary of contemporaries, and to mirror the current progress and history of the city as reflected in the life-statistics of its citizens. The men whose life-histories are here briefly given are in large measure the men who control the activities and welfare of Chicago in all important avenues of public, private, business and intellectual endeavor. The main object of bringing them together in this compilation is to place within easy reach such legitimate information in regard to the personal history of Chicagoans as it is natural that one interested in them should desire to possess.

In the daily work and turmoil of life, in this city of strenuous endeavor and achievement, one finds but little opportunity to get acquainted with those whose personalities are (outside of his own most intimate circles) of most interest. The reader can doubtless think of many a leading citizen of whom he would like to know: Where did he come from, where and how was he educated, what is his home life, his religious, social and political environment, and what have been the chief steps in his career? If the reader will turn to such names he will find just the information desired.

No other book has attempted to furnish, in any systematic manner, the salient facts in regard to the lives of those Chicagoans who are most prominent in all the useful branches of effort.

Many and varied are the interests controlled or represented by those whose life-histories are here outlined. Business and professional interests are most largely represented, because Chicago is, beyond everything else, a business center. The city has made unprecedented strides toward business supremacy, and stands first in many, and prominent in all, of the important branches of trade, production, and professional effort. Therefore this volume, partakes largely of the nature of a business dictionary, and one which contains more personal information about the living business men of Chicago than can be found collectively in all other books ever printed. Business men can find here much more than they ever knew before about their competitors and customers, and a vast amount of personal knowledge in regard to their fellow citizens which is of value from a business as well as from a social standpoint. In fact, in all lines of useful achievement, the book furnishes as complete a compendium and epitome of personal data in regard to those Chicagoans most prominently identified with the best movements and interests of the city as it has been possible to procure by patient care, experienced methods and large expenditure.

To the press of Chicago and other cities this volume presents features of easily recognized value. Here the newspaper man will find facts which are of great value, and by the use of the book in the city room the exasperating errors resulting from hasty picking up of details from unreliable sources may be in large measures avoided. The truth is here given in undiluted form and every item is presented in a plain, unvarnished, concise, condensed manner, which may be at once grasped and understood.

In number and representative selection of subjects, accuracy of detail, and authoritative usefulness as a work of reference, it is confidently claimed that the Book of Chicagoans is the most complete compilation of Chicago biography ever printed. Not only is this true, but by far the larger part of the information it contains is not procurable, in print, from any other source.

The volume contains concise, but comprehensive, biographic sketches of 500 per cent more representative Chicagoans than are to be found in any other publication. While it is not claimed that the book represents infallibility or inerrancy, it is confidently put forth as the best that has so far been produced among books of local and contemporary biography in this or any other American city.

It is the present purpose to make such periodical revision of The Book of Chicagoans as may seem to be called for by the demands of those who find it useful. With this purpose in view the publishers will be glad to receive suggestions of improvement and expansion for use in subsequent editions.
